13. When on the ground, the Paravelo is a common bike with a trailer (挂车) and a fan. But in fact, it is a flying bike. If you like, it can take you up to about 1, 200 metres high and it can reach a speed of 40 kilometers per hour.

John Fode and Yannick Read from Britain invented the Paravelo — the world's first flying bike. They spent two years making it. They believe their flying bike will change the way people travel for work, leisure (休闲) and adventure (冒险). The Paravelo has a GPS, and you don't need a pilot's license to fly it. It also can be folded and put in a small place.

Mr. Read said, "If you want an adventure, but have no money for a helicopter, then the Paravelo is for you. It just costs # 10, 000, the same as a small family car."

The Paravelo uses bio-fuel and you can just pedal it, so it makes no pollution. What's more, it has a tent inside its body, and you can go camping everywhere. It's so cool!

1. What is the Paravelo in the passage? _____
A. A car. B. A flying bike. C. A trailer. D. A fan.
2. How long did John and Yannick spend making the Paravelo? _____

16. Benedict Allen was born in 1960. His father was a pilot, and Benedict dreamed of traveling around the world like his dad. His dream came true — Benedict became an explorer (探险家). But he doesn't travel the world in an airplane. He finds a place he wants to explore, and then he lives with the local people. He learns important skills from them. He doesn't use modern things like cell phones and he likes to travel alone.

The explorations are often dangerous, but Benedict likes them. One of his favorite adventures was in 2001. He wanted to be the first person to travel by himself across the ice from Siberia to Alaska. So, he went to Siberia and lived with the Chukchi people. He learned how to drive a dog team and live outdoor. He traveled 622 miles with only a dog team. The weather was really bad. There was a lot of snow, wind, and ice, so the Journey was very difficult. Benedict almost lost the dog team, and he almost died, so he couldn't continue his journey. The exploration failed, but he was not a loser.
