4. Do you know how to give directions? Here are some tips for you.
If a person asks you how far he needs to go, there are some different ways for you to tell him.
How many streets he will go past. This works very well in a city. For example, "Go down this street, and go past four crossings along the way."
How many traffic lights he will go past. This is also good, but you must be right about the number! For example, "You need to go past three traffic lights."
How many kilometres (公里) he will go. For example, "Go 5 kilometres on Palm Road."
Tell him about any confusing part of the route (路线). If he can only turn right or he is going to turn into a small street, you should tell him about that.
Let him say the route to you again. Most of the time, we don't write it down, but you should make sure he learns about the route.
- (1) Which one is NOT mentioned (被提及) in the tips?
A. The number of the traffic lights he will go past.
B. The number of the streets he will go past. C. The kilometres he will go.
D. The time he will spend.
- (2) Which expression (表达) is better according to the passage?
A. Walk along the road and you can see it after going past two traffic lights.
B. You can see it on your right after going past some crossings.
C. Don't ask me. Ask the policeman. D. I don't think you can find it.
