3. My husband Jack got a call one evening, and then I knew I had lost my mobile phone.

We went to visit a friend in hospital last week. When Jack's mobile phone rang, it was my mother calling from my home. She asked if I had lost my mobile phone. I checked my bag. It was gone!

I used Jack's phone to call my number. A boy answered it. "I found your phone in the mall!" he said, excitedly.

"I'm Rhys. I have been trying to find you, but because it was getting late, I decided to leave. " He gave me the address of a coffee shop near his home.

Later that evening, I went to meet him there. I was afraid to go alone, worrying he was a cheat (骗子). So Jack came along. After driving 10 km, we got to the coffee shop.

As soon as I saw him, my worries were gone. Rhys was just a young boy. "How did you tell my mom?" I asked. He explained that when he found my mobile phone by the roadside, he started calling people in my list of contacts (通讯录). But they only had my mobile phone number. That didn't help. He'd called many names, starting with the letter A. Finally he got Adam, one of my friends. Adam called my house.

I was happy to get my phone back with all the phone numbers, messages and photos in it. I thanked Rhys and offered him some money, but he refused. He's really an honest boy.

5. All of us live in one world. While we are eating food, drinking water, wearing clothes, watching TV, using computers and so on, we are producing waste every moment. When we finish reading a newspaper, the paper will become waste. When TV sets or computers are broken, they will become electronic waste.

Plastic bags (塑料袋) are often used in our everyday life. The number of used plastic is increasing day by day. We like to use plastic bags because they are convenient (方便的). When we get home, we throw the plastic away. These are called "white pollution" as most plastics are white. Rubber (橡胶) is also common in our daily life. Many of our products are made of rubber. It's true that rubber plays an important role (角色) in our life. However, it also brings us some trouble when it has been used for a long time. The old rubber pollutes the environment very badly because it can't break down easily in nature— it will not be changed for a long time.
